How viable is battery storage as a solution to Egypt's electricity oversupply problem?

Egypt is exploring the potential of energy storage through batteries to combat our electricity oversupply problem: As Egypt continues to suffer from a major oversupply of electricity, the country is in need of.

Cairo, Egypt, June 15, 2025 – IFC today announced an investment to support Egypt's first utility-scale battery energy storage system (BESS), deepening its partnership with AMEA Power, a leading renewable energy developer in Africa, the Middle East, and Central Asia, and the Government of Egypt to.

Egypt's government has signed contracts with developer AMEA Power for two large-scale battery energy storage projects, the country's first. Dubai-headquartered AMEA Power announced yesterday (25 February) that it has signed government Capacity Purchase Agreements (CPAs) for the battery energy.

Cairo's energy storage sector isn't just growing – it's rewriting the rulebook for sustainable urban development. With Egypt aiming to achieve 42% renewable energy by 2035 [1], the Nile Valley has become ground zero for energy storage innovations that could power half of Africa. Who's Reading This?

These plants are designed to optimize the use of renewable energy and enhance the stability of Egypt's unified electricity grid, especially during peak demand times. This initiative supports the Ministry's strategy to increase reliance on renewable energy sources, optimize conventional fuel usage.

When news broke about Cairo's flagship energy storage initiative being postponed to late 2025, the renewable energy community collectively groaned louder than a wind turbine in a sandstorm. This $1.2 billion project - initially hailed as North Africa's answer to Tesla's Hornsdale Power Reserve -
