Overview

Should you buy a roof tent for car camping?

For those who want to take car camping a little more literally, a rooftop tent is a convenient and comfortable choice. Rooftop options strap onto the top of your car and typically pop up when you're ready to use them, which is an easy setup option at any campsite.

Which Coleman tent is best for car camping?

Pet-friendly outdoor travel expert and founder of the Kas Pack, Britt Kascjak uses Coleman's 6-Person Skydome when she goes car camping with her husband, three dogs, and two cats. This budget-friendly tent balances comfort, ease of setup, weather resistance, and durability to create a great no-nonsense car camping tent.

Is a 4 person tent good for car camping?

The rainfly and taped seams help keep you dry even in wet conditions, and the wide door and mesh windows keep the tent comfortable and ventilated in warmer temperatures. This four-person tent is great for car camping trips with two to three people, Tiffany Lin, owner and author of the hiking and gear blog FollowTiffsJourney, tells SELF.

How much does a car camping tent cost?

Just know that the size rating for tents is a measurement for how many people can sleep inside, which means it could be a tight fit if you want space for anything else. Car camping tents can range in price from under $100 to well over $2,000, depending on the size, quality, and luxury features.

What is a rooftop tent?

Rooftop options strap onto the top of your car and typically pop up when you're ready to use them, which is an easy setup option at any campsite. They can also feel slightly more luxurious than regular tents because you're lifted above the ground, and there's even space to store a comfortable foam mattress.
