Madagascar new energy storage field

Overview

Madagascar, better known for its unique wildlife, is quietly emerging as a laboratory for solar power generation and energy storage solutions – and the results are electrifying. With 2,800 annual sunshine hours (that’s enough to bake 56 million vanilla cakes!) [4], this Indian Ocean gem is.

Welcome to Madagascar’s new energy storage frontier, where lithium batteries are replacing diesel generators faster than lemurs climb baobab trees. With fossil fuel imports costing $176.6 million in Q1 2024 alone [3], the island is racing toward renewable solutions that could make it Africa’s most.
